

The Old Family Album

By G. A. MARTIN.

JOE H. SEGALL, the subject of this sketch, was four years of age when the picture was taken.

He was born in New York City in 1894, the son of a Jewish family. His father was a peddler, and he grew up in the tenements of the East Side. He was a very bright child, and his father encouraged him to study. He attended the public school, and then went to the Y. M. C. A. where he met his future wife, Miss Mary. They were married in 1914, and have three children.

JOE SEGALL.

He arrived in New York a mere six-year-old, and was placed in the hands of a peddler. He was a very bright child, and his father encouraged him to study. He attended the public school, and then went to the Y. M. C. A. where he met his future wife, Miss Mary. They were married in 1914, and have three children.

He rapidly advanced through the different mechanical processes of grinding and polishing lenses. At that time the salary was really believed to be the highest in the field.

In 1914 Mr. Segall enrolled in the New York College of Optics, which is today merged with Columbia College. In 1918 he went to Chicago, where he started practicing his profession, as assistant to Dr. Stanford, and at night attended the lectures at McCormick College.

In 1920 he started south, staying a short time in St. Louis, and then going to San Antonio, where he was employed by a firm. He then came to El Paso, where he is now practicing his profession.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. Is the Sweet bill, granting increased compensation to disabled soldiers retroactive? H. A. H.

A. The Sweet bill provides for the payment of the increase in compensation from the date of the original award. A soldier who has been receiving $10 per month under the old compensation law, and is now entitled to $10 a month under the Sweet bill, will also receive the accumulated increase of $10 a month from the date he was first awarded compensation. If, for example, he has been receiving compensation for a year, he will have $100 coming to him in a lump sum.

Q. Do salmon spawn only once in a lifetime, and shortly afterwards die? E. L. C.

A. There are two easily recognized kinds of salmon, only one of which is known to die immediately after spawning. This peculiar salmon is known as the Pacific co. salmon. It is a very large fish, and is found in the Pacific Ocean. It is a very valuable fish, and is much prized by the people of the Pacific coast.

Q. If an employer gives his employee a Christmas bonus, is it money must they include it in their income tax return? G. E. C.

A. An employer is not required to include money received as a Christmas gift in his income tax return. It must be included in the employer's return. If the money is a bonus, the employee must include the amount in his tax return as the employer is permitted to deduct it from his income.

Q. Is tattooing of the skin an old custom? H. T.

A. It is impossible to say definitely, where and when this custom originated. Records of it are found in the oldest of times.

Q. The girl whose maiden name was McDevitt.

Mr. Segall has fitted many notable men with glasses, among the number being Gen. Pershing, Buffalo Bill, Porfirio Diaz, Francisco Madero, Gen. Navarro, former governor Miguel Ahumada, Enrique Cerezo and has filled orders with glasses from Tokio, Japan, Manchester, England, Chile, Honduras and British Borneo. He has personally fitted about 40,000 prescriptions for the eyes since being in El Paso. He employs 11 people in his establishment.

Mr. Segall is the father of three sons, Joe, Phil and Bradford. His hobby is to be a poet, but he says Jake Miller made a Christian out of him nine years ago.

mail matter on a train that stops at a station but does not take on mail from the postoffice at each station. A person can carry his own letter as long as he wishes without mailing it. It is right. If a train stops in a town and does not take on mail there, you may mail a letter on it if it has a mail car. Railway employees are prohibited from taking mail from persons to be mailed at such and such a destination. They must mail a letter at the first possible opportunity if they accept one. The carrying of mail is a government function and in a strict interpretation of the law, you could not give a man a letter at El Paso and ask him to mail it at El Paso, but postoffices are not made for such offenses where friends perform the service as a friendly act and where the proper stamps are on the mail carried. If you gave a letter to a trainman at El Paso, he would take it to the first postoffice under the law he could not bring it on to El Paso. Many railroads prohibit their employees from taking letters from passengers under any condition.

Q. What is the oldest game of ball? J. O. H.

A. Hand ball is believed to be the parent of all modern games of ball, the ancestor of tennis, cricket and baseball. Very gradual was the evolution to a game where something beside the naked hand was used for striking the ball. First the hand was covered with a glove to protect it. Then came the first rude form of racket and bat, which underwent many changes until the present day racket and bat were evolved.

Q. What are the rules governing the use of a letter written by a man, sealed and stamped for mailing, must be deposited in the first postoffice that he comes to, while it contains that he can carry said letter in his pocket as long as he wants to and mail it whenever and wherever he chooses. Who is right? I would like to know if it is prohibited to

Beauty Chats By Edna Kent Forbes

Answers To Letters.

POOR Countrywoman—You can improve your hands by wearing cosmetic gloves, directions for making which were given in this space last week. This treatment would also improve the condition of your nails. If possible, have one professional manicure, so you can study the proper way to care for your own nails. If this is not feasible, however, you will find directions for manicuring from time to time in this column.

Black-Eyed Susan—You can improve your skin by using a black-head cleaning powder. This would do away with the ugly condition of the nose. Its redness probably comes from digestive disorders which cause your skin to be pimply and bring on the few pimples. Confide yourself to a simple right diet for a few months and you will notice a great improvement.

Mrs. O.—You had better see your physician about the trouble you describe.

A. E. K. N.—The best developing formula which you quote is perfectly harmless. It is a fattening tonic whose action is probably upon the mammary glands.

Personette By NIKSAIL.

WALT MASON. Next to the telegraphed news service his daily chortle has the largest circulation in the world, two hundred papers being gladdened by his homely songs. And Walt claims that the printed portion of his works represents only a very small part of his whole output, as he wrote poetry for 25 years before he sold any. He says that the rhymes he ground out solely for the sake of the game would circle the globe.

Walt entered the commercial world at the age of 15 as general handy man in a hardware store. He was an orphan and his salary of $1.50 a week was all that stood between him and the well-known wolf. So he soon decided to make a change and adopted the profession of farm hand. He pursued this noble calling intermittently for several years, making rather unsuccessful efforts to get into newspaper work at the same time. Finally he went to work for William Allen White's paper, the Emporia Gazette, and it was this paper which first published his little prose poems, which are now world-famous.

For years he lived in the Emporia, Kansas, where he was employed and now Walt has come into his own. He has been called the poet laureate of America. His verses have been referred to as the divines of literature. His readers are as varied as the population of the country. His years as hardware clerk and farm hand are shaping a big reward. They gave him the common touch, the sympathy with the unfortunates, which give his verse its popular appeal.

Walt now dwells contentedly in Emporia, Kansas, in one of those square, flat-roofed houses indigenous to our middle western towns. Here he rhymes away the days comfortably and he has not yet attained his heart's desire. He still hopes some day to own a covered wagon and go sprawling across the country trading horses.
